Interesting. The CWR has not been withdrawn. The first step of the process is in OMB and the Rule itself is still in the 6th circuit. The first step places the regulation back to the 1986 definition of waters of the US.

Hi Chuck:

Mr. Crass, Attorney for Central Sands Dairy, LLC is denying me the right to split samples of the groundwater monitoring wells within the production area.

Mr. Crass wrote "As I am sure you are aware, USEPA's jurisdiction under the Clean Water Act is limited to navigable surface waters of the United States. Additionally, the proposed WOTUS rule has been withdrawn by Administrator Pruitt. Groundwater in Wisconsin is regulated exclusively by the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, as and to the extent delegated by the Wisconsin Legislature. As such, we will not be splitting groundwater samples from the production area monitoring wells with USEPA in July; however, we will be conducting our permit-required sampling and provide those results to WDNR in the normal course."

Sincerely,

Cheryl Burdett

Cheryl:

Thank you for the information below and for your phone call today. Please come to the office building located near the truck scale as you drive into the facility and check in there. An authorized representative of Central Sands Dairy will greet you. We will have the documents prepared for you to physically inspect and copy, if you'd like. These documents will unfortunately not be available electronically.

There will be no fields available to “walk” in since these are planted with actively growing crops. Of course, you may observe any field in the NMP from the road.

As I am sure you are aware, USEPA’s jurisdiction under the Clean Water Act is limited to navigable surface waters of the United States. Additionally, the proposed WOTUS rule has been withdrawn by Administrator Pruitt. Groundwater in Wisconsin is regulated exclusively by the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, as and to the extent delegated by the Wisconsin Legislature. As such, we will not be splitting groundwater samples from the production area monitoring wells with USEPA in July; however, we will be conducting our permit-required sampling and provide those results to WDNR in the normal course.

Lastly, I have no further questions concerning the planned inspection.

Thank you.
